Your labs don't screen for colon cancer.

A wellness panel checks a lot of things. Colorectal screening is not one of them — it is a separate stool kit you take home, use, and post back prepaid, with no prep, no sedation and no day off work. It is for adults 45 to 75 at average risk, and it is repeated on an interval your clinician sets, not a one-time clearance.

- Collected at home, posted back prepaid
- A normal result is not an all-clear, and a positive one still means a colonoscopy
- Whether it is right for you is your clinician's decision
